....understanding, communicating and managing risk welcome

Decisionalysis Merges with Risk Sciences International

Risk Sciences International (RSI) is a consulting company specializing in the assessment, management, and communication of health and environmental risks and their broader impacts on both public and private interests.

RSI was established in partnership with the University of Ottawa to meet the increasing need for multi-disciplinary risk management expertise. Our senior staff and network of consultants have substantial experience in the establishment and leadership of, as well as service on, expert panels in a variety of health and environmental risk domains.

The team at RSI provides professional services to a wide range of clients, including federal government departments (for example, Health Canada, Public Health Agency of Canada, Department of National Defense), private sector clients, and international clients (i.e. the European Aluminum Association, World Health Organization, and others).
